

The GoodCorporation Standard

(Revised July 2010)

The GoodCorporation Standard is based on a core set of principles that define a framework for responsible management in any type of organisation. Under each principle, the Standard sets out management practices that can be assessed to determine how well the organisation works in reality. GoodCorporation uses an independent assessment process that looks at four levels of evidence for each individual practice and assesses them against a five-point scale.

| The assessor checks | The assessor awards grades |
| that a fair policy exists policy documents are reviewed that a system is in place to implement the policy systems are examined that records exist which show that the system works in practice a sample of records is reviewed that stakeholders, when asked, agree that the system works and is fair interviews are held with employees, customers, suppliers, shareholders, community and environmental groups | fail there is no policy or system, or it has largely broken down minor non-compliance there is a policy and system but it is not always working observation there is a policy and system that works but potential improvements have been identified merit the policy and system work well commendation the policy and system are examples of best practice |

Any organisation can undergo an assessment and those that demonstrate working policies and practices in every area set out in the Standard will attain GoodCorporation Accreditation.

In all cases, an assessment report is provided setting out the evidence presented, the assessment grade awarded for each practice, and commentary on potential improvements. An independent Accreditation Council approves all assessment reports and deals with any disputes regarding assessments.

The GoodCorporation Standard was established in June 2001 and developed in partnership with the Institute of Business Ethics. The Standard is reviewed and updated every three years. This document is the third revision to the Standard, released in July 2010.

The GoodCorporation principles and assessed practices
